TRIVIA . . .

a word symbolizing meaningless facts yet coming from the important facets of life.

Trivia and life's trivialities are said to be unimportant and meaningless. This is so because trivial things have to do with the tidbits of events from the past. These historical events still influence elements in our lives. A currently popular board game is Trivial Pursuit. Players pursue answers to questions based on important facets of life. The "when," "where," "why," and "how" aren't trivial; they lead us to pursue answers through the past to an understanding of our lives today and in years to come.

Pre-Game Madness

Having everything perfect for homcoming required extensive planning. Even before the election of queen and court, Student Council members were busy with preparations. Committees were chosen and chairpersons appointed to complete the various things that had to be done before the big day arrived. After much debating and confusion, the theme of "A September to Remember" was selected. Anyone who had free time Sept. 28, the day of the game, worked on the float. Shelly Patton had to make a trip to American Display for last-minute decorations and rehearsal for the court was held with the band so every detail was coordinated. Mrs. Jaeger, advisor, had her classes interrupted several times so she could okay the preparations. When halftime in the game came, the queen and court climbed onto their shiny cars for a royal trip around the field. The crown was then presented to Jeanine Davenport, the football homecoming queen, by '84 queen, Debbie Murphy. All the effort was rewarded with unseasonably warm weather and a downing of the Lake Fliers 21 to 10.

Instructions for the evening were given to Dan Schick and junior attendant Danielle Olwick. Mr. Biler explained what was going to happen next.

A Break With Tradition

Student Council's homecoming work was not finished with the game on Friday night. It has started a new tradition at the game in which a Penta senior girl was elected as a member of the homecoming court. The first Penta attendant was Tammy Rice. Now the task of honoring Tammy, Queen Jeanine and the rest of the court at the traditional dance was the next project. The gym had to be transformed for Saturday evening's dance. After the big game the night before, getting up before 10:00 to help decorate was difficult. Streamers were draped down across the gym to give the effect of a lowered ceiling; and Leslie Jacoby, refreshment chairperson, got two beautiful cakes decorated for the dance. The transformation of the fieldhouse proved to be successful and gave everyone a September to be remembered by all who took part.

The start of a new tradition brings Tammy Rice to royal throne as she is the first Penta attendant to grace the court.

The President's hellcopter arrives only minutes before Mr. Reagan's campaign stop at B.G.S.U.

We Played For The President

President Ronald Reagan's awesome victory over Mr. Walter Mondale was overwhelming and some credit might be given to Rossford citizens. Reagan made several campaign stops in northwestern Ohio, and on September 25 he came to Bowling Green State University in one of four huge Marine 1 helicopters. Our band was one of several local bands asked to play for his visit. The security was extremely tight and the band had to leave the instruments in the playing area for two hours while the secret-service men made security checks. Upon returning to the assigned spot, bandsmen, chaperones, and spectators were required to walk through metal detectors before entering to see the President. The crowd was ecstatic when President Reagan stepped out of the helicopter and was warmly received. A second visit occurred in October when Mr. Reagan on a whistle-stop, train tour made another appearance in Perrysburg. These occasions proved to be both educational and exciting. We were better exposed to our system of elections and felt the thrill of being involved in an aspect of the campaign.

With anticipation and excitement showing on their faces, the R.H.S. band members await the Presidential arrival.

Stepping out amid applause, salutes and the watch-eyes of the secret service men, Ronald Reagan greets his fellow Americans.

A New Twist

"The Fantastics," the longest running New York play, was definitely a success on our own stage November 16 and 17. Being the only school in this area to perform it, the audience of all ages went away smiling and entertained. The cast was a balanced and strong one, consisting of only eight members who gave it their all. Mr. Wilcox, the director, commented that it was the best cast he has worked with at Rossford, after over 20 shows. "The Fantastics," a somewhat-modernized twist to "Romeo and Juliet," delighted everyone.

What was the longest running play that was ever performed?

"The Chorus Line"

Keys To The Future

The dedication of the new addition to the school was held October 17, 1984, in the Wayne O. Hosafros auditorium. Mr. James Ingham, principal, served as master of ceremonies. His opening comments noted the new stage behind him which could now hold the entire varsity band, who played for the occasion. After Mr. Anthony Judson, superintendent, gave a brief history of the project, Mr. Richard Heffelbower, architect, presented Mr. Kenneth Kornanyos, board president, with the keys to the new addition. Mr. Ingham concluded the ceremony by inviting the parents to tour the facilities as part of the annual open house also being held that evening. The program for the evening concluded with refreshments in the new cafeteria.

Back To Tradition

Teenagers sometimes had a hard time making up their minds. For football Penta students decided that they wanted to have an attendant to call their own. Basketball Homecoming brought back the old tradition of voting. There was no Penta attendant. The sophomore class sponsored the dance entitled "A Winter's Dream." Everything went smoothly and many students enjoyed the homecoming activities.

Lori Anderson was the sophomore attendant for basketball homecoming this year. Who was the senior attendant last year?

Practice Makes Perfect

The National Honor Society announced its new members early in February, and the installation was held on March 12. The members were selected and rated in each category: leadership, character, service, and scholastic performance — which required at least a grade point average of 3.4. A practice installation was held to familiarize the new inductees with the process, which included four speeches given by old members, the lighting of candles — which represented knowledge, and the signing of the membership book. The purpose of the National Honor Society continued to be to help individuals to grow and become better citizens in the scholastic, leadership, character, and service areas.

The flame of knowledge is being passed from John Szul to Dale Hart at rehearsal.

Learning to sing was not too difficult for the cast of the spring musical "Carousel" since many students who tried out for leads and chorus numbers were enrolled in vocal music courses. Dancing, however, was a different story. A choreographer helped the forty-three cast members, including thirteen athletes, put together production numbers. One problem unique for the director this year was giving directions since both foreign-exchange students, Henrique Carcamo and Christoph Rodes, had parts.

Individuals

Award winners and exchange students were recognized this year. Two students, Henrique Carcamo from Brazil and Christophe Rhode from Germany, came to study our American culture. Other people were recognized for their leadership skills, musical talents, and academic abilities. Some of the students had to write essays, audition for positions in musical organizations, and exhibit leadership qualities. Students who received these awards often had the opportunity to attend seminars and listen to various speakers. While learning these seminars, students learned more about themselves and their environment.

Selected for Buckeye Boys' and Girls' State were Front Row — Jennifer Galernik, Karole Karpinski, Shelley Mierzejewski. Row 2 — Clyde Alexander, John Szul, Doug Belkofer, Ron Recknagel.

"Missing You" sung by Danny Woods is one of the last songs the group sings.

What? A Concert In School!

The question may have been asked several times by students before November 12. On that day the group Freedom Jam performed an assembly program during school and a concert in the evening. Freedom Jam was one of eight bands that was sponsored by the Young American Showcase Company. The group's purpose was to give students a message about freedom while performing rock music. Drew Wiseman, the mixer and the manager of the group, explained that there were many high school seniors who auditioned for the groups of which only thirty-five members were chosen. From there they went to camp to learn their routines. The groups were only together for a year and the equipment was given to them. After the year was over the equipment was returned and members had to audition again if they wished to be in the group again.

"Over there" is where Brian Scott tells these sophomores, Brenda Lewis, Lisa VanCamp, Julie Ekey, and Amy Jeziorowski to place the case.

Brainstorming

Some honors classes were specifically designed to offer a greater challenge to the students who wished to take them. The classes moved at an accelerated pace and had the grades weighted more heavily as an incentive. Although there were many choices, some of them were more popular than others with the different grades. Some of the seniors took Advanced Placement English, in which they read "Julius Caesar" this year because some had not had the play as sophomores. Other honors courses were Math IV,' French IV, or honors Independent Social Studies. The juniors chose Honors Algebra II, which had one-to-one experience for the first time on the computer to write their programs, and Honors Chemistry II. Sophomores picked Honors Chemistry I, which had computers organize their data from their lab practices, and Honors Geometry, which required a research paper on non-Euclidean geometry. Freshmen were able to select Honors Biology, Honors Algebra I, or Honors English 9, in which they took a field trip to see the play "Double Billing." All of these courses were for those who wished to exceed normal requirements and take the challenge.

The Three R's Plus

As we progressed through junior high and high school, we were expected to fulfill certain requirements. In the seventh and eighth grades there were nine-week orientation classes that introduced different elective areas of study, such as Home Economics and Industrial Arts, both of which received new facilities this year. In high school, students were required to take reading, writing, and mathematics classes in addition to civics and science courses. This year new teaching aids, such as computers, were incorporated into many of the classes; field trips were taken, such as in Mrs. Jaeger's American Literature classes; and science classes were involved in many experiments, such as when Mr. Lees' ninth-grade science classes dropped eggs from the roof. A few reasons for this system were to broaden our minds, expose us to new concepts, and strengthen the skills that we already possessed.

Delicious thoughts are on the minds of Karen Keesee, Kathy Kopp and Linda Vest as they diligently work to make scrumptious cupcakes in their home economics' orientation class.

Definite Diversity

After a student had met the standards of taking specific required courses, he was free to choose from our numerous selection of elective classes. On November 7 and 8, an outside group of educators formed the North Central Evaluation team which visited classes to closely scrutinize our standards. They spoke favorablly about all of our options. There are seventy-seven electives to choose from with English and social studies having the most. Economics was a new elective added in the business curriculum to conform with state standards. Because of the many different classes from which to choose, a student had the opportunity to make his course of study conform to his areas of interest.

Meeting the Needs

Many special programs have been organized for the students who have difficulty learning in the regular classroom. These classes were designed to aid people physically, mentally, and emotionally. Help for the developmentally handicapped and for those with learning disabilities was offered. Further aid was obtained in the skill center at Penta. Ramps and elevators were installed in the school to ease the process of moving between classes for the physically disabled. All students were further considered as we had our first bi-annual career day. On November 28 about fifty professionals were invited in to speak on their jobs and the education required for these careers. Regular class was suspended as students attended two seminars. Most felt the activity made them more aware of specific job duties and what would be needed while still in high school to help prepare for such a career.

Once In A Lifetime

"We're going to play for Reagan at Bowling Green!" This was a quote heard from students in the band when they found out. The Rossford High School Marching Band, made up of students in grades 9-12, was one of the few bands in the area invited to attend the welcoming for President Reagan in Bowling Green. Mr. Biler announced that all band members were to report to the music building. It was there he told them the exciting news — they were going to play for the President! Playing for President Reagan wasn't their only accomplishment this year. To get their uniforms cleaned they raised money to pay for the cost of drycleaning. So they started with their successful fundraiser of selling fruit and cookies. Selling fruit and cookies for cleaning of their uniforms was important, but playing for the President was a "once in a lifetime experience."

Entertainment-Making Specialists

Two groups of "entertainment-making specialists" at R.H.S. were the Spotlight Singers and the Pep Band. Spotlight Singers was a select group of students who had to audition to be chosen for the group. They met everyday and practiced everyday, also. Practicing everyday was a must for Spotlights as many people had to prepare for solos or choreograph dances. Just like the Spotlights, the Pep Band was a select group of students who were involved in Varsity Band. The job of the Pep Band was to promote pep and enthusiasm into the crowd at the basketball games during time outs and halftime. Pep Band's major responsibility was to the crowd at basketball games, while the Spotlight Singers travelled around the Toledo area performing.

Exams! In Glee?

With the introduction of the exam schedule at R.H.S., exams were required to be given in every class, even glee. Students in glee were given two tests, a written test and a voice test. The test was seven pages long dealing primarily with music terms, reading music, and then applying it to music when singing. Both parts of the exam were equally important; each grade was taken then averaged together to come up with the final exam grade. Test taking wasn't all the 60-member glee did though. It traveled to Festival of the Trees, Portside, Lourdes College — for taping Cablevision — and to all of the grade schools, in addition to the concerts. Even though an exam in glee at first seemed ridiculous, students needed to learn about music and had to apply it to their singing — especially when performing around the area.

Student Council, National Honor Society, and Librarians all had incorporated responsibility in their groups. They each offered different services for the school and students participated in and became members in the groups if certain requirements were met. Student Council had the job to provide dances, floats, and student exchanges. The National Honor Society provided various school supplies at the book store and promoted academic, leadership, character, and service development and achievement. The Librarians had to be reliable and responsible to make sure that the books were available and in proper order. All three groups had the objective to make the students more responsible but at the same time to still have fun.

A Few New Wrinkles

In the past years those who took Spanish were automatically in the Spanish Club, but this year a fee was due to become a member. Now, to take part in a club activity members had to pay their dues. The Spanish Club became more active this year, as it took a trip to Fort Wayne, Indiana, to see Flamingo Dancers. During the Christmas Season, the annual Spanish food drive was a success, bringing in boxes of food for a needy Mexican family. Also, a trip to Mexico for the following summer was planned. The French Club had its annual initiation and French dinner. A trip to Canada was in store, too, for some students. This year added some new wrinkles in both clubs so geater things could be accomplished.

With teams that consisted of entirely underclassmen, the Quiz Bowl and Chess teams were not lacking experience. This was quite unusual to have such young students dominate the academic scene in high school. These were the same students who have been consistently strong in the past two of three years. These two teams have to rely on brain power, and the Quiz Bowl team did just that with a victory over P-burg, which was shown on CH. 13 High School Quiz in January. The Varsity-R Club, had the most members this year then any other year since it began. It was very successful, partly due to the number of students that belonged to the club. With the 50/50 raffle, concession stands, and 3 dances after basketball games, a great deal of money was made to supply the athletes themselves with equipment and necessary items to keep the sports' program running smoothly.

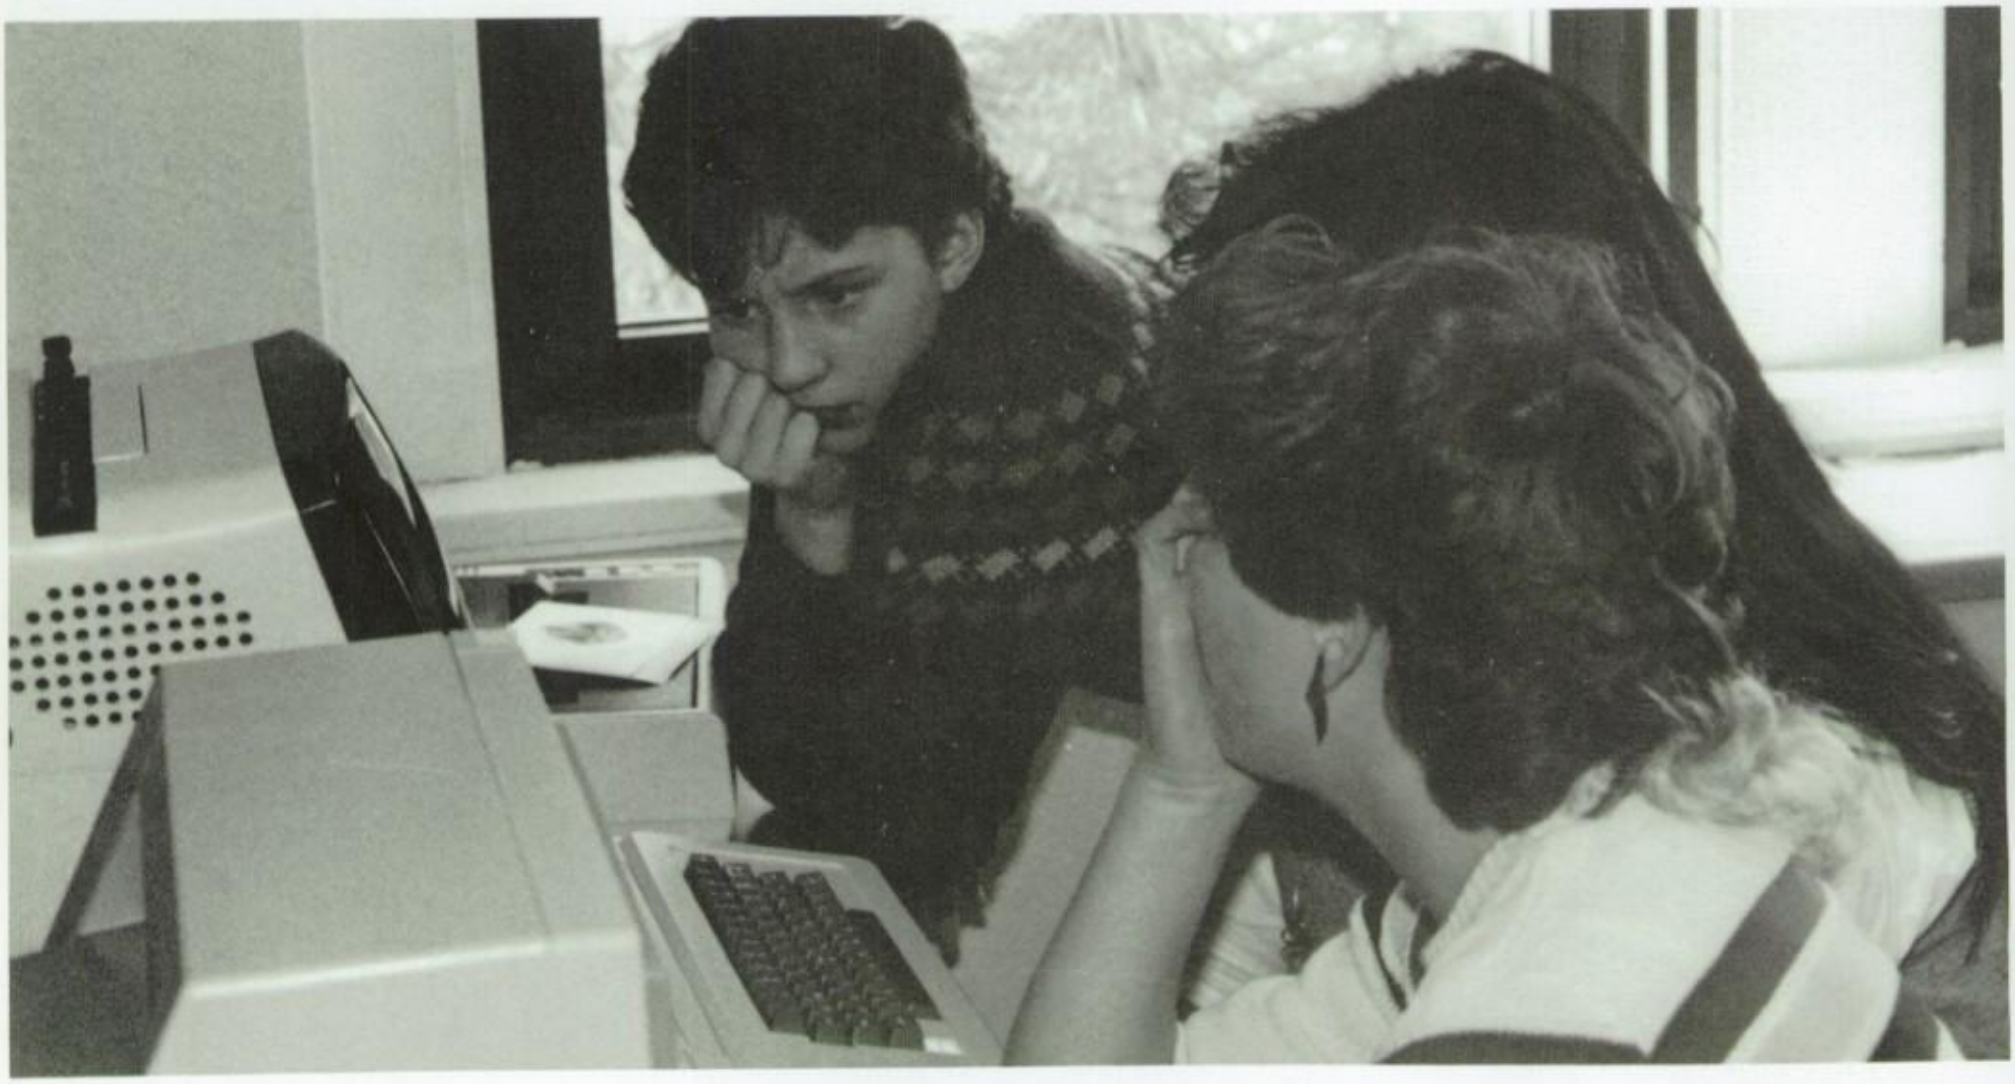
Technology, Blood and Communications

Two things changed this year when it came to the school newspaper. In September the student body voted on a name change for the paper, in which the name "R-Echo" was voted down for "Paw Prints." The other change was the staff's new way of writing its articles. Since we now have fourteen computers, the staff can write the articles and get them checked and ready for publication quicker than the old method of typewriting everything. Once the "Paw Prints" staff learned a few things about computers, the job was a lot easier.

On December 14, the Red Cross Club held a blood drive at R. H. S. Students over the age of seventeen were asked to give blood. Even though many students were afraid of the needles, they found the experience of giving blood a worthwhile one.

Some people didn't know exactly what the Communications Club did. It was a group of representatives from Rossford High School and the students from Rossford that went to Penta. This group of students held meetings once a month to discuss matters concerning both R. H. S. and Penta. This club, also provided the Rossford students at Penta with information about what was happening at Rossford, and answered any questions the Penta representatives might have had concerning their home school.



Taking time to learn, Lori Kaufman, Martina Durkac and Michelle Smith had to learn how to use the computers before they could do their assignments for "Paw Prints."

Working To Do Their Part

Many students at Rossford High School were involved in programs and clubs that required extra time outside of the school day. Occupational Work Adjustment was one program where students went to school for half the day and to a job for the other half. The Drama Club, also, put in plenty of extra hours preparing for the competition play, "Waiting For Lefty," a play which did not get off the ground because enough guys did not try out for the cast. Last minute changes were made, and director Mr. Harry Wilcox chose "Taming of the Shrew" which received a rating of "Good." Ellen Szorady and Troy Raszka received outstanding acting awards which more than made the hard work worthwhile.

Working on the yearbook staff was a hard and tedious task but the staff had a new goal to strive toward. The '84 edition of the yearbook received a first-place rating from Columbia Scholastic Press Association. Therefore, the '85 staff was under pressure, too. In the first two weeks of the year many ideas went around the room from balloons to boats before the theme was selected to reflect the hit of the year — Trivia. Different forms of trivia games came out — Trivial Pursuit, People, Entertainment Tonight, and Pocket Trivia. Shedding a little light on Rossford's Trivia became the goal. There were many ideas to keep it going through the book through graphics and designing trivia cards. Another enjoyable part of putting the book together was learning about R.H.S.

Wind Go Away!

The JV and Varsity Teams had to cope with the bad weather during the spring '84 season. N. L. L.'s Best!

After many dissappointing years the varsity team finished first in the N. L. L. and set a new school record, too! It was the first Rossford team to win twenty-one games in a single season. The previous record was eighteen games. Clyde Alexander, Mike Kornasiewicz and Jim Pietrasz, picked up first team N. L. L. honors for playing shortstop, utility infielder, and pitcher respectively. Along with their N. L. L. awards Clyde, Mike and Jim received first team in districts: Clyde for utility infield, Mike for first base and Jim for pitcher.

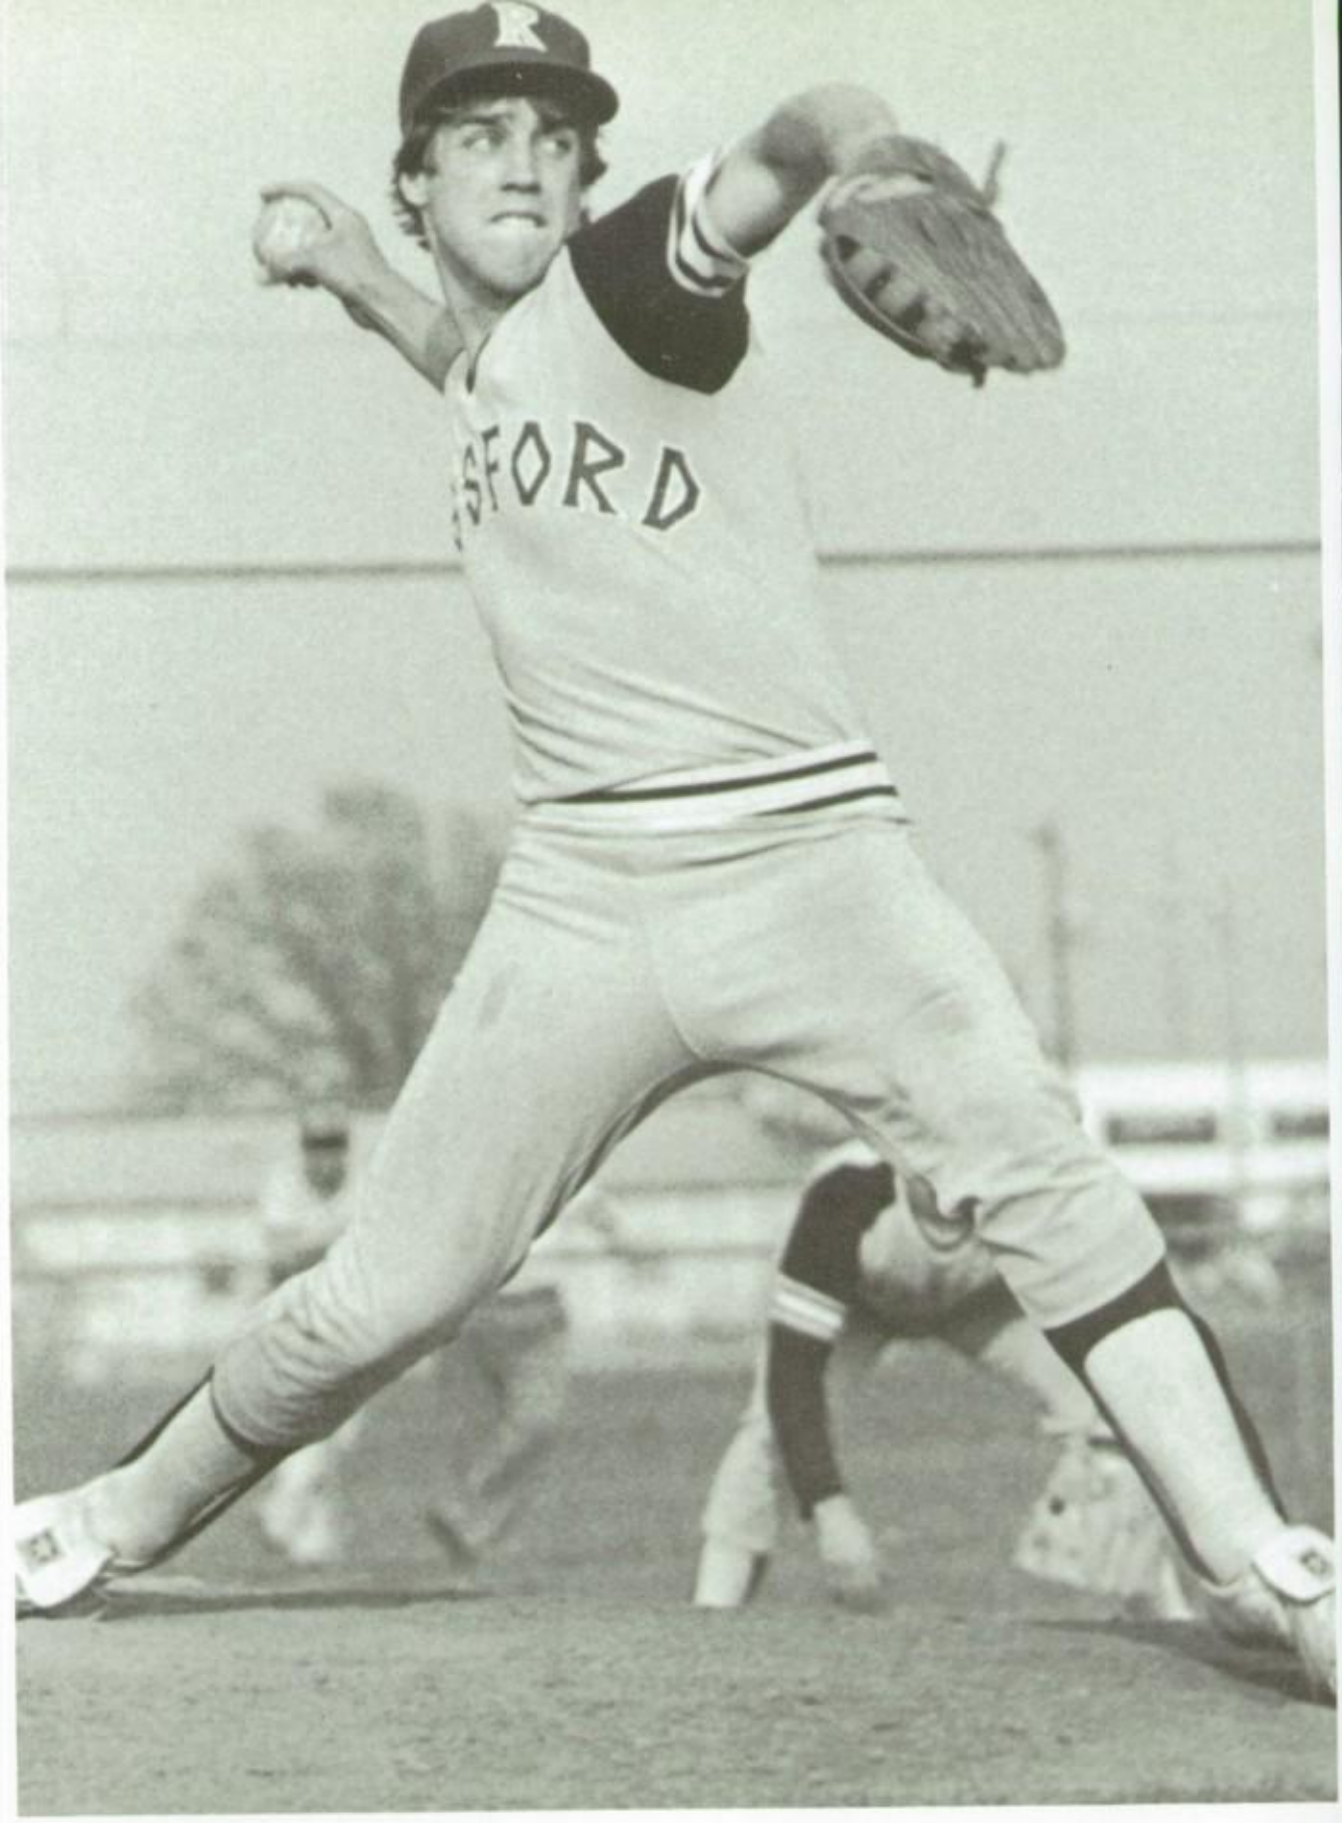
The season was a long one but the championship made the long practices, freezing games and occasional losses worth the time spent.



With a record of 8-1 for the season Mike Kornasiewicz often says his key to success is "It's all in the delivery."

Same Coach

Mr. Edward Tucholski was an all around special coach. He coached tennis in the spring and golf in the fall. Everyone made the tennis team because of the limited number who tried out. Most of the team members were guys with the exception of Lexi Neisler. Being the only girl in the league, she found her opponents to be all males. Perhaps this explained why she was most successful playing doubles with Jim Neisler, her brother, and fellow team member Troy Sattler. The youthful golf team started the season with flying colors reaching a recordbreaking high of 5 wins and no losses. But then experience proved mightier as the team, composed of two freshmen, began to faulter. At the end of the season Matt Vidra, Kyle Moore, Mike Stahl, Kevin Heck and Brent Bennet became five-letter winners and this young team could be a challenger next season. Matt Vidra was awarded with first team N. L. L. honors for his excellent performanance throughout the season.

A Step Ahead of the Boys

Since the beginning of girls' cross country, in 1974, the girls have grown in size and experience. This year all of the members of the girls' team participated at the districts meet. Bringing home two trophies throughout the season, the girls really showed everyone what they could do. The boys' cross country team did not have many team victories this year, but everyone's goal of self-improvement was reached. Everyone on the team showed improvement. Doug Belkofer, who ironically did not finish the first race, competed in sectionals and was the boy who qualified for districts with a 14th place finish.

With the finish line in sight, Marge Badik gives a sigh of relief as she finishes the race at districts.

Still More Helmets?!!!

When the season began in late July, Coach Tom Ferguson handed out sixty-four helmets, the most ever at Rossford High. And once again, Coach Ferguson had provided us with another strong team. With the number of players on the team, more effective plays were easier to accomplish at practice. Also, the fans' support this season was tremendous — assemblies were more spirited and the crowd responded enthusiastically to the team's success. Eleven players were recognized for their performances in the league with Clyde Alexander awared first-team N. L. L. at halfback and Ron Recknagel awarded first-team honors at tackle on both defense and offense.

Hardwork Pays Off

The hardwork of the cheerleaders was never really realized by anyone until one actually sees what went on. This year's squad consisted of 5 seniors and 2 juniors, who spent a lot of time decorating the halls and the hoop for the Friday night games, which was only part of their committment. The other half was crowd involvement. That was really great during the season. The enthusiasm and pride expressed by the student body helped lead the fighting Bulldogs to a successful season. Although it was hardwork, in the end the outcome was worthwhile.

Rebuilding Year

With a team that consisted of only three seniors, the girls were not thought of as a contender at the beginning of the season. And being such a young team, the record didn't really show how it played. Many considered it a rebuilding year with the number of underclassmen that got playing time. When the sectional tournament rolled around, the team got things together and defeated Otsego, before losing to state-powerhouse Springfield. Earning individual honors was Jenny Jackson, who played in the District 7 All-Star game at Archbold. After the season, the team and coaches went to Eastern Michigan University to see the U.S. Women's Olympic Volleyball Team play the Japanese team.

Celebration is on the minds of Tina Kachmarik, Mary Jo Anderson, and Dawn Bailey as they slap hands when the final point is made to preserve a victory.

Surprise Striker

The bowling team was filled with some talented bowlers in '85. One in particular, Joe Tutak, a freshman on the White team, scored 177. He scored three strikes in a row in the ninth and tenth then scored a nine in the tenth frame. This to say the least was a surprise to the rest of the bowling team. When Joe was asked how he felt about this he said, "Very shocked and happy."

Who, in the 1985 year, had the highest average?

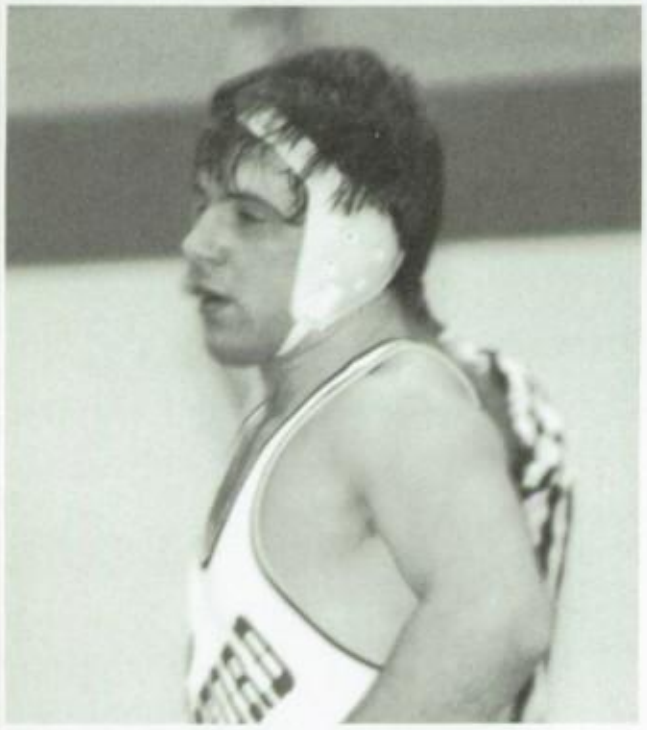
Best Team Ever

The 1985 wrestling team was certainly the best team that the school had ever had. At the beginning of the season, the wrestlers and coaches were optimistic, considering the fact that only four seniors would be on the team. After placing second at the Springfield Invitational, the team traveled to Marion for the three-day Marion Harding Classic, finishing in first place. The next weekend, they were nudged out of first place at the Fremont Ross Invitational. The wrestlers then won all seven duel meets against league opponents. For their efforts, the team was rated in the Top 10 in Ohio at the AA level for much of the season. At the N.L.L., the team finished first, and coach Jim McCumber was voted Coach of the Year in the league. Individual champions were Mark Tinney, Matt McCumber, Mike Romp, Brian Romp, and Ron Recknagel. Advancing to the state tournament in Columbus were Matt McCumber, Mark Tinney, and Ron Recknagel. Ron finished third, and received a plaque for having the most pins.



Tired, but victorious is senior Brian Romp, as he successfully pinned his opponent.

Getting his hands full of an opponent is a specialty with Ron Recknagel, as he often encountered opposing wrestlers who were much larger than he was. Ron ruled the mats this year, as he won his second consecutive league title.

Rebuilding The Team And Rebuilding Respect

Along with the new season the girls' basketball program also got a new coach. Miss Jodi Haney played four years of basketball at Albion College where she was captain her senior year. A new coach means new ideas and Coach Haney brought the idea of weekly goals to R.H.S. Goals such as the "Windex Award" for "cleaning off those boards" and being highest rebounder and "Hamburger Helper" for most assists. These awards are posted on the player's locker. Through these awards and personal encouragement Coach Haney stressed tough defense so the team would gain respect from others. League teams and coaches were surprised by the intensity and the "never-give-up" attitude of the young team, learning that Rossford was a threat and deserved as much respect as any other team in the league. Along with this change came the change from a half-court game to playing a transition game due to the small stature and quickness of the team. The lack of height proved to be an asset as many teams fell to the fast-paced game of the team.

What cheer did the varsity girls start their home games with?

Plagued By Injury

The boys' varsity basketball team was faced with some rough times this year when five out of the twelve players were injured sometime during the season. If hard work and dedication wasn't enough, the team had to pull together to overcome its disadvantage. Although his was a young team, it was considered a tough contender in the league. Losing only by small margins the Bulldogs gave everyone a good fight. The Bulldogs finished the season with a record of 5-9 in the league and 10-10 overall.

Busy Busy Busy!

When football season came to an end, the basketball cheerleaders became very busy. They had to have the gym decorated, chose lockers to decorate and get their cheers organized. All of this had to be completed before the first game. The cheerleaders then planned a spirit week, but due to the snow it was cancelled. Both the football and basketball freshmen, J.V., and varsity cheerleaders put together a pompom routine. Many weeks of practice went into the routine but all paid off on Feb. 22 as they performed at halftime at the game against Maumee. On Feb. 25 the varsity cheerleaders decorated the seniors' houses since Feb. 26 was their last game at R.H.S. As the season came to an end, the cheerleaders planned an elementary clinic which was held on March 9th. The senior cheerleaders also held the try-outs for the 1985-86 school year. Cheerleading was not just putting on an uniform, there were things that had to be done before and during the season.

Ending '85

As the class of '85 entered its last year of high school, there were a lot of things to be done before the year ended. Senior year was traditionally a year of fun and good times, but there were still decisions to be made by the class as a whole. The pink rose was chosen as the class flower, while the class colors were picked as burgundy and light pink. The song "Free Bird" was selected and the class motto chosen was a poem written by Laura Earls entitled "The Last Year." As the 1984-85 school year came to a close and the seniors graduated, many fond memories left with the parting students.

The Last Year

Sitting in study hall
cold as ice
When will we get out of here
anytime will be nice
Thinking of last summer
laying in the sun
Why did it have to go so fast?
Is time always on the run?
Our days are numbered here
things will never be the same
Soon we will not be here
Will anyone know our names?
What if we're afraid
to face life on our own?
We don't want to grow up
and be out there on our own
Thinking of last summer
laying in the sun
Why does time go so fast
Is it always on the run?

— Laura Earls

Decisions, Decisions

If school work wasn't enough, the seniors were faced with many new decisions, along with the hustle and bustle of everyday activities. Through the course of the year, seniors were confronted with choosing a college to attend or deciding what to do with their lives after graduation. Unlike many, some were faced with going out and trying to find a job. If that didn't boggle the mind, senior announcements and pictures had to be dealt with. Though the decisions were difficult, the outcome was definitely a good one.

Bundle of Fun

This year's seniors were known to many for their unique personalities, that seemed to make everything go a little smoother. Their excitement and enthusiasm were displayed at sporting events in class and throughout the halls. Even when things got harder and more demanding, there always was someone who would brighten up the day and get things going. With the fever of graduation in the air, the fun times would always be remembered.

The Pleasures of Privledges

As a senior, one was given certain privledges such as senior steps and leaving for lunch. But more came about during the course of the year. Only seniors were given the choice of taking part in activities on a day chosen. On Halloween almost the entire class showed up dressed in all of the weird ways imaginable. Everyone got a good laugh, and the best thing was that no two people were the same. All athletes and their parents were honored for the last time during the last home game. However, the most popular day, by far, was senior skip day. Although it was illegal according to Mr. Ingham, it was virtually impossible to stop. When it came time for the class hall-decorating contest during the Christmas season, seniors banned together for a first-place finish. Every year, seniors are blessed with privledges that other classes aren't but when certain ones were thought of and the class stuck together, a better year was certainly in store.

Honoring her parents is Jenny Jackson during the last home volleyball game.

A Winter Wonderland is the theme for the decorating of the senior hall, which won first place, during the week before Christmas vacation.

True identities are revealed as the seniors gather on the senior steps.

The Wave Hits

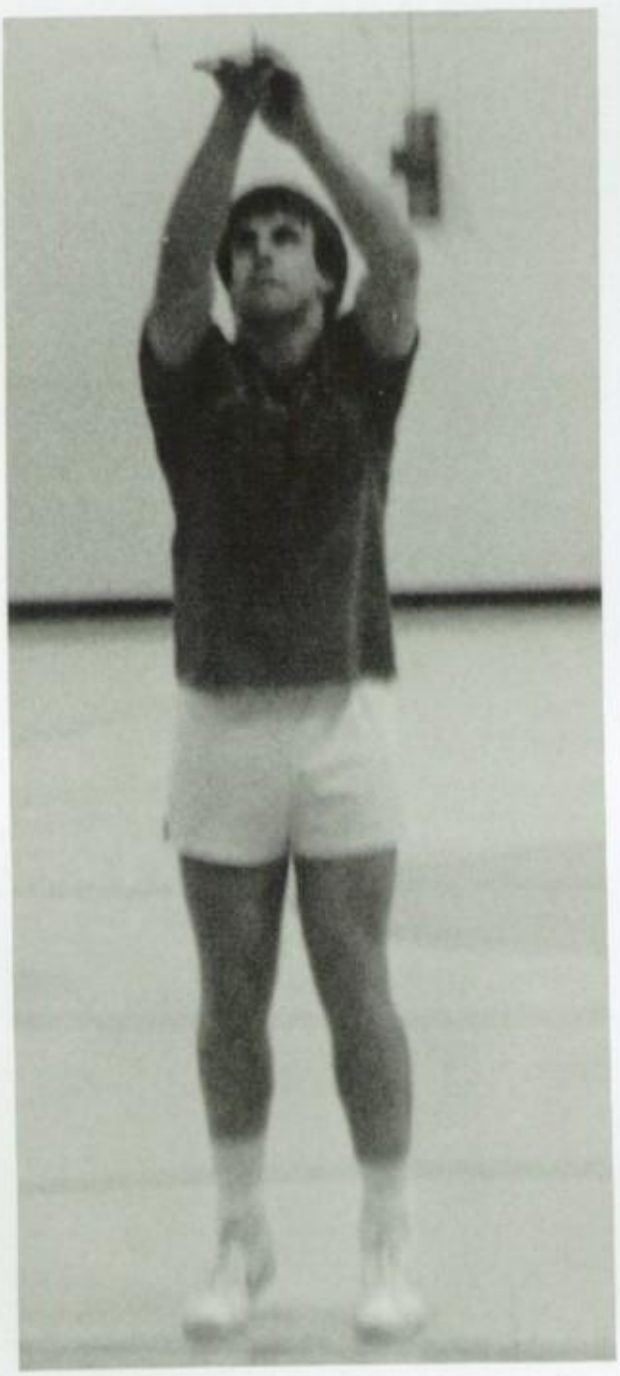
After the wave hit the professional and college football stadiums last fall, it flooded down to many high schools, too. With increasing popularity, the wave, a spirit maneuver in which students stood up then sat back down, continued back and forth across the student section for some time. Students became a major factor at home games. At away games, students from other schools, and our own, would try to out do the other. With the extra fan participation, it made games more exciting, and best of all, the students couldn't drown while having a good time.

Full of spirit, students participate in the game by doing the wave.

Senior Stars

As senior sports go, both boys and girls had challenging seasons in their respective intramural sports. Senior girls put up a tough fight but lost their powder puff battle to the junior girls by a score of 12-0. On the other hand, the senior boys basketball team, Omega Tapa Kega, tied the freshmen boys in their first outing but were more successful against the juniors, winning by a score of 51-38. Although the teams seemed to have had opposite seasons, this did not take away from the fact that both teams tried their hardest and put forth their very best.

Leaping high for the opening tip-off against the freshmen is Jeff DuShane.



Shooting two, Mike Kornasiewicz is up for the shot and concentrates on his follow-through.

Cancellations Make Fun

The second semester started out on the right foot as far as the students were concerned. On the first day of the term, a two-hour snow delay turned into a cancellation. Temperatures dropped below zero with a wind chill factor of seventy below, and this provided another day out on Friday of the same week. Without having to go to school, students really didn't have much to do but play in the snow. After four days of vacation, two which were weather related, seniors still found the snow as an excuse to let off a little steam.

A snow frolic becomes the activity for seniors outside the music building after they found the snow too light to build a snow "person." This didn't hamper their eagerness to push each other into drifts or to fill a friend's jacket.

Getting the Job Done

One of the main things that the juniors accomplished was raising money for the prom which they sponsored. The magazine sale, for the most part, was a big success. Of course, there were a few individuals who thought it trival and "blew it off," but as a group the class earned over $2,000 dollars! There were even students like Marge Badik and Bill Segur who sold over $100 each! Many of the juniors were involved in other organizations in school that needed financial help, also. Some of these groups were the Spotlight Singers, Varsity Band, Cheerleading, and various sports. This year one could say that the juniors really "got the job done" when it came to successful fundraising.

Responsibilities?!! At Sixteen?!!

Extras such as clothes, magazines, spending money, all the juniors wanted them, but not all paid for them! Their parents wound up doing the paying, until they finally got the bright idea of having their children help pay for the extras. Some juniors were opposed to this but had to get that first part time job to have the cash they wanted. Stacey Rosenbalm felt that this gave her "too many responsibilities at sixteen!" Generally, juniors agreed with their parents and wanted to earn their own spending money. Having the job was costly, too, as Rick Sevenish found out because he couldn't do some other things he wanted, like try out for "The Fantasticks." These juniors learned that accepting responsibility meant making sacrifices. It was all part of growing up!

Hobbies

Other than doing homework, selling for fundraisers, and working at a job, the juniors had an additional pastime — hobbies! Many common hobbies reported among the juniors were reading, sports, dating, watching T.V., and listening to music. Specifically, juniors were into Stephen King and Danielle Steele, all Rossford High sports, going to a movie or a party, "General Hospital," and Prince. There were a few, though, that had unique hobbies. Dave Washington was the lead singer in his band; Matt Vidra and Dan Martis hunted and trapped; Joe Durco and Neil MacKinnon water-skied; and Marsha Nawrocki was a photographer. So, as one can tell, the juniors found time for hobbies, even though they had homework, activities, and jobs, too.

Steady as she goes! The cheerleaders for the junior powder puff game are Matt Weir, Tony Dalton, Floyd Swope, Tony Stolar, Mike Romp, and Jay Grandowicz.

Tough Work

All sophomores were required to take a semester of English composition and many students found it difficult to accomplish. One of the biggest problems in writing a composition was a thesis sentence for an opening. Students could find an opening but many times it was rejected by the teacher, sometimes causing a single sentence to take as long as two days to write. But the tougest task was eased if students enjoyed the topic chosen. One topic never chosen before was dogsled racing, which was the subject of Don Christian's paper. His grandfather, who races dogsleds at Oak Openings, introduced Don to the sport. Other topics included dreaming, mood swings, and chimps. Those sophomores who had selected topics of personal interest found the report easier to do and the information of lasting value.

Finishing the composition and meeting the deadline is the aim of Beth Atwood.

A thesis idea causes Lori Anderson to reflect on the topic she has chosen for her paper.

After Hours

Many hours of hard work were spent in school, but the sophomores seemed to find time for enjoyment outside the classroom. As the year progressed they developed more interest in participating in baseball, basketball, football, wrestling, extra-curricular clubs, French club, Spanish club, quiz bowl, pep rallies and hanging out at Marco's. Not only were they having fun competing and cheering with their classmates but they helped promote school spirit. As a result sophomores found that hard work and determination mixed with many small pleasures produced a very satisfying year.

Revenue For Rafting

A sales goal to earn funds to go white water rafting in West Virginia was a task taken on by the sophomores. Under the guidance of Mrs. Sinkey, class advisor, sales boomed all year long. From the minute the doors were opened, the sophomores were out selling everything from giant cookies and rainbow supplies to Entertainment '85 books. All the money wasn't used for recreation, however, since the sophomores sponsored basketball homecoming.

Why Us?

It couldn't have happened to anyone else. It had to happen to the freshmen. The state made a few changes in the '84-'85 school year that a lot of kids really didn't like. One they hated the most was that they couldn't go to Cedar Point because all students had to be in school for a full day every day. When this class becomes seniors it will also miss being allowed out of school a week earlier then underclassmen.

A third and the worst change was the addition of credits required to graduate. The class of '88 needed 18 credits to graduate whereas previous classes only needed 17.

Another state mandate required a six-hour day. Since R. H. S. has a seven-hour day, we could only delay for one hour for fog or snow or had to make up time lost. That may seem good but it wasn't. We would have needed to make up the day in the spring.

All these changes compelled the freshmen to ask, "Why Us?"

A New Home

After being shuffled around during the past few years because of construction work, the freshmen found a new home in the lockers on the second floor of the new wing. A tradition had been broken in that the freshmen hall had always been situated in the basment of the high school. With the bright red, yellow and blue lockers that were brought in to lighten up the hall, the new look was greatly appreciated.

Pausing briefly in their new hallway are freshmen Christie Anderson, Angie Cook, and Sandy Buttner.

The honor of decorating this new locker in the freshmen hallway goes to Lori Clayton.

Where's the Beef?

Everyone probably remembered the popular, little, old lady in the Wendy's commercial that asked the question, "Where's the beef?" If she wanted beef, R. H. S. freshmen would have been the people to get it from because they were selling beefsticks and cheese as their prime fund-raiser. The money raised was put into the treasury for future class use. A total of over $1500 was made from the sale. People were still going to Wendy's but look out, Wendy's, because "the beef's" also here at R. H. S.

Having found the beef Mr. Ingham, with help of Nicki Patton, won't be going to Wendy's tonight.

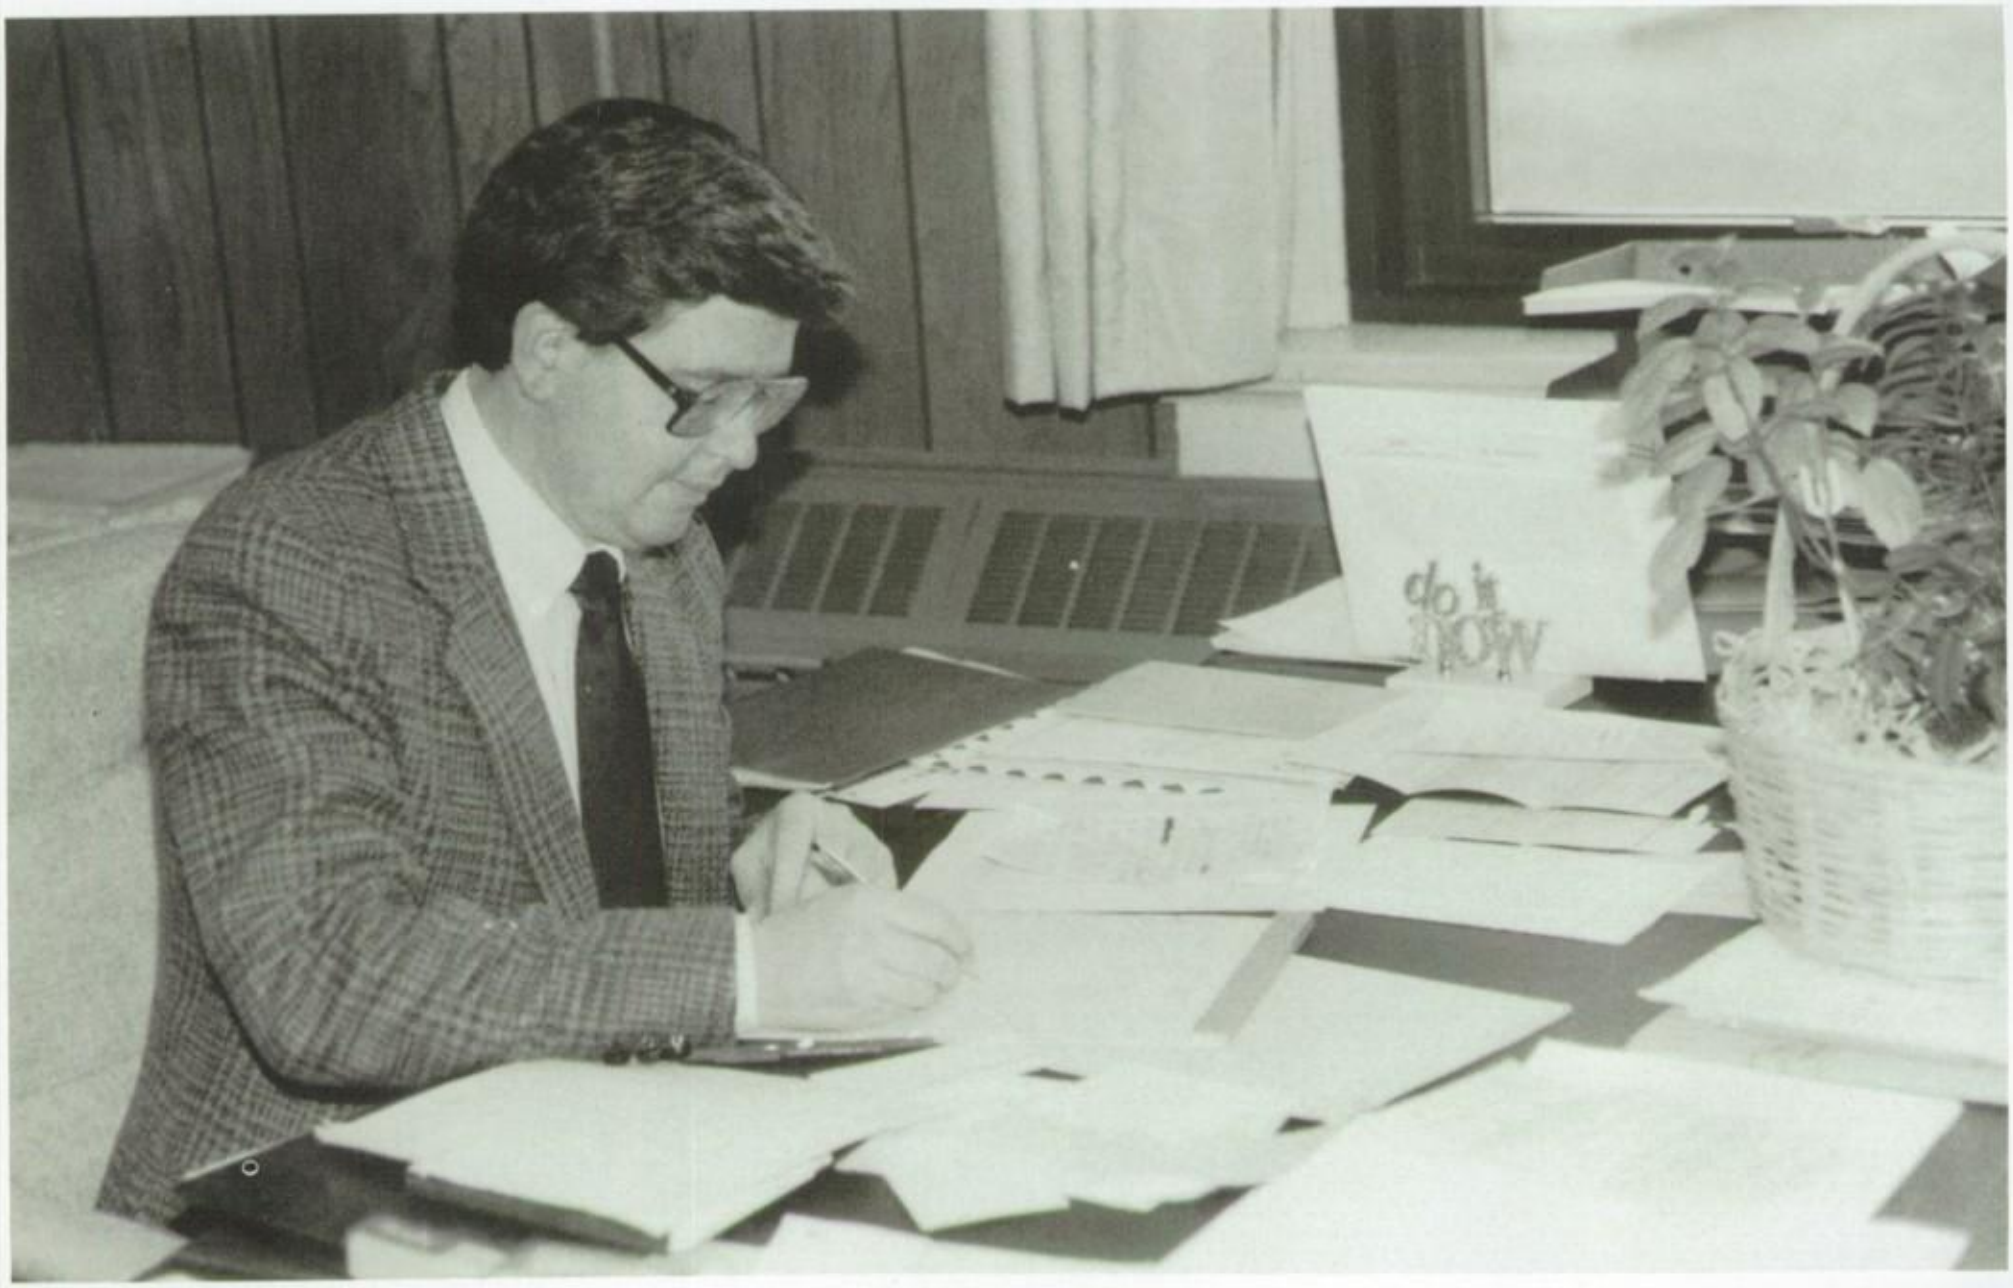
Principals Bring Change

As much as it may seem otherwise to many students, the principal's job concerned more than handing out demerits and sending students who lingered in the hall off to class. Mr. Ingham's job involved many long hours of meetings and dealing with school happenings, and he also had to find time to attend many of the sporting events, plays, and other extra-curricular activities.

To help Mr. Ingham, who is in his second year as principal, run the complex, Mr. Fred Koester was appointed as jr. high principal when Mr. Kaylor resigned this summer. Entering his sixth year at Rossford, Mr. Koester was faced with an important decision, that of accepting the jr. high principalship, but in the process giving up teaching science. Giving up coaching football was another tough decision, as he was a coach for many years at both Rossford and Eastwood. With two new principals, changes began to take place as discipline became stricter and academics began to be stressed more through curriculum changes and required semester exams.



Taking it easy was hardly the case for Mr. Ingham, who found little extra time for relaxing.

A full load of work is encountered by Mr. Koester, as he takes on a new job as jr. high principal.

Time for Play

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" could be a slogan for the teachers at R.H.S. Contrary to what some students believe, teachers do have pastimes and social lives! Most of the teachers have families to take of, but they still find time to paint, do needlework, care for gardens, run businesses, and become involved in sports such as golf, racquetball football, white-water rafting, tennis, and running races. Most teachers did lead normal lives, and all these activities kept them quite busy as they worked fun-time into their lives.

We Needed You

It took more than teachers, students, and books to make the schools run smoothly. Hard work and dedication from various people were necessary. A new addition this year was Mrs. James, who was hired as a secretary to replace Mrs. Emch, who retired. In addition to the long hours, the bus drivers were confronted with the new fog rules that took effect this fall. Cooks and custodians, also, had to work around the new changes. All of the effort done by these people helped each school day run more efficiently.

Busy answering phones and always being cheerful is Mrs. Debbie James, our newest addition to the Rossford office staff.

Hold The Noodles

The seventh and eighth grade bands helped with the annual spaghetti dinner this year, one of the band's biggest money makers. Another big fund-raiser was the selling of citrus fruit and Christmas cookies. Another large group in need of funds was the eighth grade glee club with one of its biggest groups ever at forty-nine. One of Mrs. Barrow's students Diane Salisbury says she enjoys the class and singing very much.

Choosing Activities

Junior high student council was an important part of junior high extra curricular activities. Quiz bowl was another activity that was a sport of the mind, not body. Drama was a club that entertained. Seventh and eighth grade cheerleaders and wrestlerettes helped cheer their teams to victory.

Already On The Run

Different from grade school activities, junior high students were already getting into the "fastlane" of high-school life. Most junior high students got involved in groups and found themselves "at school after school." Athletics took a lot of time and practice, so instead of going home after school students found themselves working for perfection. Some students got their first taste at being on and working as a team. They also learned that cooperation and high goals were not only needed in sports but that they would be needed in all aspects of life.

Practice Makes Perfect

Getting well into the school year, junior high students saw fall come and go. Like fall, the fall sports were over with and winter's sports came. Getting a little experience at being on a team helped when trying out for the winter sports. Although some students didn't try out for fall sports, they got into the winter sports. Learning that working together on a team wasn't the only thing needed for perfection, so was practice, which was done a lot.

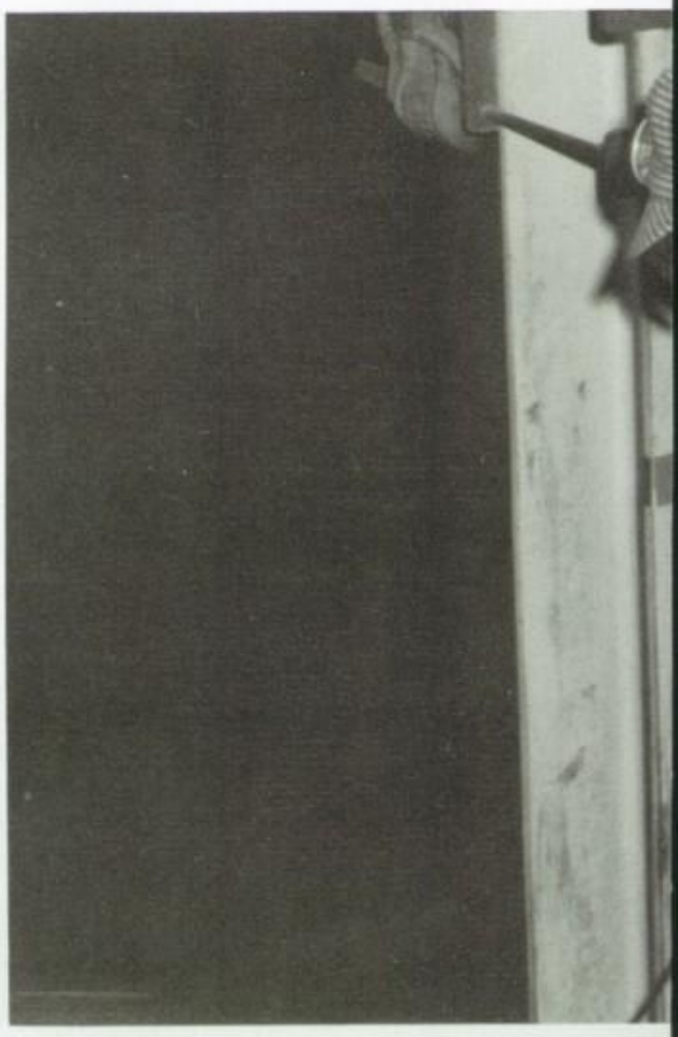
Eight Grade Impressions

The eigth grade year tended to be a year that made great impressions on students approaching that first year in high school. Eighth graders tended to mimic more and more the styles, likes, and dislikes of the freshmen in areas such as attitudes, clothes, and music. Trying to act grown up and dress the part was half the battle, but keeping up with the musical tastes tended to be a little tougher. Classical, light rock, or heavy metal? Which to choose? Rock and heavy metal seemed to be most popular with these young people, expecially after the band Freedom Jam came to town, making quite a hit with the youthful lady rockers. Impressions were important and helped the eighth graders to grow up and understand more about the world around them.



Getting rowdy at the Freedom Jam concert is the main objective of the many jr. high students in attendance.

On Our Own

Being that the '84-'85 school year was the first year that the jr. high was really split from the high school, the jr. high students did not mix in the lives of the high schoolers like they had in the past. The seventh and eighth graders had always had their own lunch hour, but now all the classes were held in the jr. high, no high school kids were allowed in their building, and the jr. high had their own activities, athletic games, clubs, and assemblies. In December, a special dance was held during school to encourage development of social graces. The separation had worked well as it helped jr. high students adjust better and enjoy their own activities.

Discussing plans for after the game, Kelly Conley speaks with a friend.

Year of Change

As seventh graders soon discovered, their surroundings were always changing. In grade school, the student would stay with one or two teachers the whole day, whereas in jr. high there was a different teacher each hour. At the quarter and semester the seventh graders experienced orientation classes, where the student studied a different elective course every nine weeks. This enabled every student to make a wise choice when the time came to choose his high school curriculum.

Reading over the recipe was the job of Sue Schick while two friends prepared the ingredients.

Learning how to use the buffer was the objective of Brian Davenport in industrial arts.

Joining the Class of 1990

Being part of something, whether it be a team, club, or just the crowd, was important to the adjustment of a jr. high student. As most grade schools did not sponsor many activities for the young people, seventh graders for the first time were given the opportunity to join the football or volleyball team, take part in student government, and perform their own plays. All in all, seventh graders found their first year in jr. high a learning as well as an enjoyable experience.

Making tackles and blocking the other team were the techniques displayed by the seventh grade football team.

Enjoying being with friends and out of class, seventh graders cheer at the pep rally.

What new annual dance was started at Rossford this year?

The Morp.

R-trivia

As kindergardener Jamie Baumgartner plays with the die, who knows what kind of trivia is going through his mind.

As a child grows toward adulthood, he faces many experiences, discoveries, and problems. For eighteen years he will acquire an assortment of odds and ends of information. Some of it is crucial while some is unimportant. One day ends; the next begins; and more trivia is added to the conscious and subconscious thoughts. These thoughts fill the minds of young adults, who will soon be old adults, and then gone. People come and go, yet the facts remain — those which are important and those which aren't. Whether trivia has value is a question only you can answer, as you pursue the game of life.
